Dr. Lois Salmeron was a founder and faculty member of the nursing program at Oklahoma State University-Oklahoma City from its inception in 1970 to 2001. She served as dean and a professor of the Health Science Division. More than 2,500 students have passed through the nursing program at OSU-OKC, with a 91 percent first-time pass rate for the state nursing examination.

Dr. Salmeron helped to develop the first nursing program offered in Oklahoma through distance learning. She was the first nurse to receive the Graham White Award from the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in 1989. She is currently the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor at Oklahoma City University's Kramer School of Nursing.
