WOMEN'S TACTICAL

HUMAN PERFORMANCE SUMMIT

About our Summit:

The Women's Tactical Summit gathers passionate individuals from diverse disciplines to inspire, educate, and foster resilience among female tactical professionals. This is the first human performance summit in the Oklahoma area specifically focused on women in tactical occupations. Historically, the unique needs of female tactical personnel have not been adequately addressed in traditional conference settings. This summit aims to highlight the performance needs of women in these populations.

Our speakers will present evidence-based research and practices tailored to the distinct performance requirements of women in public safety and the military. We are excited to offer educational sessions on nutrition, hydration, blood work and interpretation, pelvic floor, strength training, speed and agility, and women's-specific physiological training considerations. Presenters include: Dr. Sam Moore, whose research interests center on integrating laboratory and field-based methodologies to advance female athlete sport science innovations that improve health, safety, and performance across the lifespan; and Johannah Zabal, CSCS, who pursues lifelong learning, better communication, and inspiring coaching.

You'll meet Michelle Adams-Arent, RD, the Director of Olympic Sports Performance Nutrition at the University of South Carolina, Vanessa Frost-Piedrahita, who supports women in doing strong work, building strong minds, and living strong lives, and Dr. Maura Shea, who builds not only strong firefighters, but also culturally competent athletic trainers.

And we're also welcoming back award-winning dietitian, Megan Lautz, Registered Dietitian and Personal Trainer, who focuses on helping firefighters and police officers make impactful nutrition changes in an imperfect environment;

The OSU-OKC Campus, steeped in a tradition of excellence, provides the perfect setting for networking and learning. Under the experienced guidance of Director Joe Bennett, the OSU-OKC Fire Academy trains between twenty and forty firefighters per semester. Sixty percent of these graduates are hired by a career fire department within two years of obtaining their certifications. Director Bennett, a dedicated advocate for enhancing educational pathways in tactical professions, has graciously agreed to host the 2nd annual Women's Tactical Summit.

How you can help:

Financial support through Sponsorship from community and industry partners will play a key role in amplifying this initiative. Participation from organizations committed to empowering women in the tactical field to join us will make this event extraordinary. You will gain visibility among dynamic professionals and contribute to breaking down barriers and championing diversity within the tactical community. Together, we can equip future generations with the skills and confidence they need to thrive in high-stakes professions.

Join us as we celebrate the spirit of resilience, courage, and determination at the inaugural Women's Tactical Summit on May 29, 2026. Don't miss the opportunity to showcase your organization's commitment to empowering women in tactical roles. Ensure your Sponsorship is submitted by the deadline to become part of this pivotal event at the OSU-OKC Campus where futures ignite and heroes are born!

Attendance at the 2025 inaugural Women's Summit included more than 100 live attendees, plus another 100 via streaming.
